

This week has been about finishing off our main features. For me this has been making sure the Blockly toolbox is up-to-date, all the blocks we want are present and are generating the correct code, and being able to bring bots back into the workspace so the user can edit or view the code for their bots. I have also been refactoring some of the blocks to be easily understood by our target audience. This means changing some of the text on blocks so they can understand exactly what each block will do.
